MORE PRIZES FOR POULTRY

N. W. MO. ASSOCIATION IN BETTER FINANCIAL CONDITION.

DATES DECEMBER 7-10

F. P. Robinson Elected President at Meeting Saturday.—T. C. Gray Re-Elected Secretary.

Because of a better financial condition, the biggest premium list in the history of the Northwest Missouri Poultry Association will be offered at the annual show to be held here December 7, 8, 9 and 10.

The dates for the show were set Saturday afternoon at a meeting of the Association at the courthouse when new officers were elected and the members decided to have a show scored by score cards instead of by comparison.

F. P. Robinson of Maryville was elected president to succeed Mrs. Guy D. Aley, who lives near Maryville. Mrs. Aley was made vice-president, to hold the office held by Charles Viles last year. T. C. Gray was re-elected secretary-treasurer. The association elected Mrs. Aley to assist further in the work of the show by naming her assistant secretary.

The board of directors for the Association also was elected at the meeting. The following were re-elected, B. T. Wray, Hopkins; J. Ward Stevenson, Graham; Mrs. John Morehouse, Hopkins, and Mrs. Homer Thompson, Conception Junction. A. C. Ford of Maryville was elected to the board to succeed Mrs. F. C. Ware of Arkoe.

Charles Viles of Maryville was the choice of the Poultry Association to be superintendent of the show in December.

The officers and board of directors were directed to take immediate action to procure judges for the show. The building to house the show will not be decided upon until near the time of the show, Mr. Gray said Saturday.

Mr. Gray's report showed that there is now a balance of $74.34 on hand. Premiums last year amounted to $128.50, and they will be augmented at the 1927 show.

Judge J. H. Sayler, who presided at the meeting, said the Association was facing its most prosperous year. In years past the Association has had to buy pens each year for an increasing exhibit. Now the Association owns a sufficient number of wire pens to take care of all the exhibits and can devote more money to premiums.

Clarinda Business Men Visit Maryville

Several Clarinda business men were in Maryville today attending a meeting held at the Chamber of Commerce relative to the rating and collecting plan of the Pioneer Service Co., of that town. In the party were Harley Pearson of the Pearson Coal Co.; Kent Thornell of the law firm of Stephens, Thornell and Miller; J. H. Lawson of the Lawson Dry Goods Co.; L. M. Cassat of the Richardson Lumber Co.; Jack Strong, dry cleaning and clothing; George Mace, insurance; and Fred Goudie, connected with the Pioneer Service Co.

Several business men of this city were in attendance at the meeting.

Shawnee, Okla., Girl Dies Here Last Night

Frances Hughes, Age 13, Visiting Relatives Here, Taken Ill Friday.—Mother Arrives Today.

Frances Hughes, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Hughes of Shawnee, Okla., died at 10:30 o'clock last night at St. Francis Hospital following a several day's illness. The young woman arrived in Maryville last Tuesday to spend the summer with her aunts, Mrs. C. C. Craig, Mrs. A. T. McDowell and Mrs. Joel Trullinger, and her uncle, Lon Hughes, and their families. She became ill Friday and was taken to the hospital yesterday morning.

Her mother, who was summoned yesterday morning, arrived in Maryville at noon today and her father, who was notified at her death last night, is en route here. The body will be taken to Shawnee for burial. Other funeral arrangements will not be made until after arrival of Dr. Hughes.

Frances was about 13 years old, and, besides her parents, is survived by a brother, Horton Hughes, who is attending medical school in Chicago, and a younger sister, Daisy May, at home.

City Council Fails to Decide on Levy

Body to Meet Again Tomorrow Night.—Three Permits Granted Saturday Night.

The city council will meet tomorrow night to fix the city levy for this year. The council met Saturday evening but did not come to any decision regarding the levy.

Three permits were allowed by the council. Math Grady was given a permit to erect a one-story, five-room house, 26 by 36 feet at 115 South Buchanan street, to cost approximately $4,500.

This is the first building permit to be issued within the fire limits this year.

George W. Wallace and H. L. Groves in business as Wallace and Groves, were granted permission to erect a 10 by 4 foot metal sign over the sidewalk at 408 North Buchanan street. They also were given a permit to install a gasoline pump on the sidewalk near the curb at the south of the building, known as the Dave Angell building.

THREE HURT IN ACCIDENT

SAVANNAH MAN PROBABLY WILL DIE AS RESULT OF CRASH.

COUPLE HERE HURT

Miss Etta Trusty and John Knox Get Cuts and Bruises.—Third Driver Is Blamed.

Miss Etta Trusty of Burlington Junction, a member of the 1927 graduating class of the State Teachers College, was taken to the home of her father, Dr. G. C. Trusty, at Burlington Junction, early this afternoon, after being treated at Missouri Methodist Hospital in St. Joseph for bruises and cuts she received in an automobile collision on the state highway near Savannah yesterday evening.

John Knox, salesman for the Montgomery Clothing Company here, with whom Miss Trusty was riding, suffered slight bruises but was able to be at work today. His coupe was demolished in the collision, while Heinz Kurtz of Savannah, driver of the other car, suffered a fractured skull and early this morning at the hospital was not expected to live.

The accident occurred near stop 18, near the Savannah interurban. The St. Joseph Gazette gives this account of the collision:

"Kurtz suffered fractures of the skull and is not expected to live. Knox and Miss Trusty received cuts and bruises, but the condition of neither is serious.

"The injured were rushed in H. O. Sidenfaden's ambulance to Missouri Methodist hospital. Dr. Frank X. Hartigan is attending Kurtz and Dr. H. K. Wallace the others.

"Noah Moran, Jr., Savannah, riding with Kurtz, escaped injury.

"The motor cars collided head-on and were badly damaged. The accident resulted when a third motor car cut in between two as they approached each other, it was said."

Tilson Family Has Its Annual Reunion

Twenty-Seven Members Meet at Coffman Cemetery, South of Rosendale.—Basket Dinner Later.

The annual reunion of the Tilson family was held yesterday afternoon at the Coffman school house yard, south of Rosendale, after the graves of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Tilson had been decorated in the Coffman Cemetery. Twenty-seven members of the family met at the cemetery, four miles south of Rosendale, at 2 o'clock and after that went to the school house.

A basket dinner was spread on the lawn later in the afternoon. Those who attended were Mr. and Mrs. John L. Tilson and daughter, Vera; Mr. and Mrs. Loren L. Tilson, Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Tilson, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Markley, Mr. and Mrs. Will Bain, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bain and daughter, Catherine, all of St. Joseph; Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Burks and daughter, Mildred, Pickering; Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Pettigrew, Bolckow, William Turner and daughters, Sarah Frances and Emeline, Barnard; Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Tilson and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tilson and son, Billy French, Maryville.

FORCED DOWN 100 MILES FROM GOAL

ROAD CLAIMS BEFORE COURT

LAND OWNERS WEST OF BURLINGTON ASK DAMAGES.

FOR A RIGHT-OF-WAY

Dissolution Of Mineral Springs Road District, Southwest Of Burlington Junction, Asked.

The time of the county court, meeting in regular monthly session today, was taken up hearing property owners who are claiming damage for the right-of-way of Highway 18, west of Burlington.

C. J. Bussjaeger of St. Joseph, who is in the right-of-way division of the State Highway Department, met with the court, with the view of getting right-of-way deeds and to advise the court upon the amount of land that will be taken by the proposed highway and give estimates of value of land that would be take.

The judges seem to be favorable toward paying for the land for the right-of-way if reasonable prices could be agreed upon. Otherwise, condemnation suit will be necessary.

Ten property owners, owning land southwest of Burlington Junction, today filed a petition with the County court, requesting that the special road district, known as Mineral Springs, which includes 2,152 acres, be dissolved.

The petition states that the continuance and operation of the district has become unnecessary and a useless expense upon the property owners.

The property owners, claiming they own more than a majority of the land and the amount of land they own in the district, who asked for the district to be dissolved, are:

Reuben Arthur Dies After Long Illness

Services Were Held This Afternoon With Burial at Oak Hill Cemetery Here.

Reuben Arthur, 43 years old, died at 7 o'clock Saturday evening at St. Francis Hospital of a complication of diseases. Excepting five weeks, he had been a patient at the hospital since last January.

The funeral was held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the Price Funeral Chapel, conducted by the Rev. W. S. Woodhull of the First Methodist Church. Burial was in Oak Hill cemetery.

The Arthur home is seven miles northeast of Skidmore. Surviving Mr. Arthur are two brothers, Nicholas Arthur, with whom he made his home, and William Arthur, near Wilcox. Mr. Arthur has lived near Skidmore for a number of years.

Henry L. Jost, Kansas City, a Visitor Here

Senator Reed's Presidential Chances Good, Says Former Mayor and Congressman.

Henry L. Jost, former mayor and congressman of Kansas City, and his son, Henry Jost, Jr., were in Maryville this afternoon. Mr. Jost and his son attended the Valley homecoming held north of Hopkins yesterday, Mr. Jost having attended this school between 1884 to 1890.

Mr. Jost thinks Senator James A. Reed's chances for the Democratic nomination for President are very good.

A WAR OVER WATER LINE

ARMED GUARDS PATROL LOS ANGELES AQUEDUCT.

WILL SHOOT TO KILL

Third Attempt Is Made To Dynamite Supply Tube.—Attributed To Owens Valley Ranchers.

Los Angeles, June 6.—A virtual state of war exists today in Owens valley, high up in the hills, as armed guards patrol the Los Angeles aqueduct with unqualified orders to shoot to kill, following another attempt to destroy the water system.

Armed with machine guns and grenades, the guards began a vigil of the 265 miles of water way that stretches between the mountain lakes to the city of Los Angeles, the main water supply for more than 1,000,000 people.

The third dynamite attack within ten days, attributed to ranchers who claim their fam lands and towns have been laid desolate by the aqueduct system was made early yesterday.

Judgment for Mrs. Paxston Is Affirmed

Decision by Court Here, Giving Her $2,562.50, Is Upheld by Kansas City Court of Appeals.

The Kansas City Court of Appeals today affirmed the decision of the court here in the case of Mrs. Minnie Paxston against the Gillam-Jackson Loan and Trust Co., according to a message received by Charles F. McCaffrey. This case was tried here at the April term, 1926, and the jury returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $2,562.50. McCaffrey & Cook and Shinabargar, Blagg & Ellison represented the plaintiff, while the defendant was represented by A. F. Harvey and Cook & Cummins. The case was tried before Judge Guy Park of Platte City as special judge.

Bible School Boosts Its Attendance to 84

The attendance at the Daily Vacation Bible School is increasing, eighty-four being enrolled this morning. The Rev. R. A. Mitchell, pastor of the M. E. Church, South, spoke at the closing assembly this morning, telling the story of the Two Ink Bottles.

BEN LINDSEY OUT FOR GOOD

SUPREME COURT DENIES REVIEW OF OUSTING ORDER.

ELECTION CONTESTED

Famous Juvenile Judge at Denver Loses Job to Dead Opponent, Royal Graham.

Washington, June 6.—Judge Lindsey today lost his job on the bench of Denver's juvenile court.

The United States Supreme Court denied him a review of the Colorado Supreme Court order ousting him.

Lindsey, famous for his sociological work and advanced views on marriage, divorce and other problems of the home, was ousted by the Colorado court in an election contest suit brought by his opponent in the November, 1924, election.

The opponent, Royal Graham, has since died. Decision against Lindsey in the state court was announced in January.

Kentucky Welcomes Relief From Flood

Six Counties Isolated In Area Where Death Toll Is Sixty And Damage Twelve Million.

Louisville, Ky., June 6.—Virtually isolated from the rest of the world for the last week, the flooded area of eastern Kentucky welcomed relief, especially today.

Tabulations of estimates of damage in the six stricken counties in that section raised the total losses to about $12,000,000.

About 125,000 persons are affected by the disaster caused by an 11-hour cloudburst. More than 20,000 miners in the district are out of work. Lines of communication are still out of commission and the previous estimates of 60 dead remain unchanged.

Smithsonian Medal Goes to Lindbergh

Washington, June 6.—Charles Lindbergh was awarded the Langley medal for flying by the Smithsonian Institution today. Only four other men, the two Wright brothers, Glenn H. Curtiss and Gustave Eiffel, a Frenchman, have been given this honor.

150,000 Persons Now Depend on Red Cross

New Orleans, June 6.—Approximately 69,000 persons are being cared for in Red Cross refugee and concentration camps in Louisiana, it was announced at relief headquarters here. In addition the organization is feeding 81,000 persons outside the camps, bringing the total dependent on the Red Cross to more than 150,000.

Mrs. Anna Berry of Greeley, Colo., who was called here five weeks ago by the critical condition of her sister, Mrs. A. W. Littler, who died Thursday night, left this morning for her home.

BELLANCA'S FLIGHT ENDS IN SWAMP NEAR BERLIN

LONG FLIGHT RECORD FALLS BY 295 MILES

Clarence Chamberlin Shatters All Existing Marks by Flying to Helfta, Germany.

Washington, June 6.—Clarence Chamberlin broke all existing records for long distance flying by 295 miles according to the United States Geologic Survey.

The actual flying time to Helfta, Germany is 3,905 miles.

FLIERS' WIVES SAIL TONIGHT

MATES OF CHAMBERLIN AND LEVENE TO JOIN THEM.

BOTH RECEIVE GIFTS

Mrs. Chamberlin Gets A $15,000 Check While Other Is Presented Platinum Watch.

Brooklyn, June 6.—The Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce today presented a $15,000 check to Mrs. Wylda Chamberlin and a platinum wrist watch to Mrs. Grace Levine.

Brooklyn, June 6.—Mrs. Clarence Chamberlin, accompanied by Mrs. Charles Levine, said this afternoon they expected to leave tonight aboard the North German Lloyd liner Berlin to join their husbands, who crossed the ocean in a quicker though more perilous manner.

The trip will be made as guests of the steamship company and on invitation of the German ambassador.

Home Town Celebrates.

Denison, Ia., June 6.—The 3,500 persons who make up the population of this place are celebrating today over the arrival of C. D. Chamberlin, pilot, of the Columbia, in Germany. All day yesterday the people of this town scanned every news report of the flight. His family was in Omaha watching closely press reports.

The story of how Chamberlin's flying days came near being ended when he was competing in the 1925 international races at New York was told. His plane crashed into some telephone wires and Clarence was picked up with a broken leg and other injuries.

"You will never fly again," his doctor told him.

"I'll show you," Clarence replied. In the two years intervening Clarence has shown.

If Mr. Chamberlin had had his way Clarence would not now be flying in Europe. His father wanted him to follow his footsteps as a jeweler. Clarence tried the watch repairing business when he came back to Denison after his war service, but he had "higher" ambitions and went into commercial aviation, a field in which he has been engaged in since that time.

Chamberlin started his first long distance trip while still a youngster in high school. In his junior year, he acted as chauffeur for Charles Tabor, a wealthy Denison resident, on an automobile trip to California. That was in the days when motor cars were still new. But Clarence knew all about them. His dad owned the second one ever brought to Denison, and Clarence drove it, tinkered with it, repaired it, fixed it and generally learned all about it before he was of "legal" age.

War Interrupted His Plans.

At one time, it is said, he planned to open a large garage here. He had obtained backing for the venture, but the war came along and he hurriedly sold out to enlist in the balloon service at Omaha. From there he was transferred to the aviation service at Rantoul, Ill.

He acted as test pilot and instructor at Kelly Field, Tex., for a time and the armistice found him at Hoboken, N. Y., awaiting a ship which could take him to France.

His disgust at not reaching the war front was indicated by a card he sent his parents. The entire message was one word—"Hell."

Mrs. James Blagg, her son-in-law, George Y. Burrus of Omaha, and Marvin Allen attended the homecoming at the Pleasant Grove church yesterday.

GAS FAILS 100 MILES

Chamberlin and Levine Are Forced Down at Helfta, Germany, After 43½ Hours in Air.

Berlin, June 6.—Clarence D. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine's attempt to fly from New York to Berlin ended today in swampy ground near Forst, Prussia, 75 miles southeast of Berlin.

The Bellanca monoplane Columbia was forced down there and its propeller was broken after it had established a new non-stop flight record of approximately 4,000 miles. Neither Chamberlin nor Levine was hurt, reports received here said, and both were at the Hotel Andorge at Cottbus. Cottbus is a large town west of Forst.

The Bellanca was forced down at Forst between 5 and 6 a. m. eastern United States time.

The actual non-stop flight of the Bellanca plane ended at 7.40 a. m. Berlin time 1:40 a. m. eastern standard time, at Helfta, near Eisleben, about 100 miles southwest of Berlin, when the Columbia's fuel was exhausted. Obtaining gas through the courtesy of Luftstranda, German civil air lines, Chamberlin and Levine continued flying as far as Forst.

Duplicate Propeller To Be Sent.

Five minutes after the forced landing became known at Berlin, a plane departed to bring the broken propellor to Berlin, where a duplicate will be made immediately to enable the Bellanca to fly again.

Charles Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis left Roosevelt Field for Paris with little more drama than surrounds an air mail plane on a scheduled trip and landed in a mob of 100,000 excited Frenchmen. Chamberlin and Levine left in as dramatic a manner as could be desired and landed first at an obscure air field where they were not expected and next in a swamp far removed from crowds.

Aside from that the two flights from the spectators' standpoint were strikingly alike, despite the different routes followed and different destinations.

Despite the frantic preparations of the Columbia, many persons were surprised when it actually left after the long period of disputes and disappointments.

Sympathies Changed.

But when Levine, with only slight experience with airplanes surprised everyone by joining the adventure, sympathies underwent a sudden change and it was evident that the greatest hopes of the nation were with them.

The plane was last seen on the North American continent at Trepassy, Newfoundland.

Then came the long wait for news. The liner Mauretania, New York bound, 500 miles off the Irish coast, sighted Chamberlin at 10:30 Sunday. The Columbia circled the liner, flying low enough to identify it.

The plane was next sighted at 4:10 passing Plymouth, in England, and headed across the channel toward France. At 6:30 it was seen at Guernsey, one of the chanel islands. Then Normandy reported seeing it as darkness settled down.

The plane was next sighted at Dortmund, Germany. That definitely established Berlin as its goal, and it seemed success was assured.

Great Throngs Gather.

Great throngs gathered at the Berlin flying field. Official welcoming parties were on hand and the crowd was in a holiday mood.

But the Columbia had flown far out of its way, dodging storms, and apparently became confused in directions.

Chamberlin landed at Helfta, 100 miles southwest of Berlin at 3 a. m., eastern time, and refuled. The plane

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

Mark Twain Made the Frog a Classic.

How Mark Twain would have chuckled over the excitement among students of the College of the Pacific as to the originality of his story, "The Jumping Frog of Calaveras County." The idea that the story was not new, stressed as a discovery by the instructor in American literature, was written about humorously and at length by Mark himself, in an essay included in the complete edition of his writings.

The author traced the origin of the "Jumping Frog" back to the ancient Greeks, giving different versions of it as he went along. It was an enormously amusing notion to him that anybody should have supposed he invented the plot to a story the effectiveness of which lay entirely in the mode of telling. The incident itself of the jumping frog is of no consequence. Only a Mark Twain could take such a slight thing and tell it in a way to make it an American classic. It is as Kipling wrote:

When 'Omer smote 'is bloomin' lyre,
He's 'eard men sing by land an' sea;
An' what 'e thought 'e might require
'E went an' took—the same as me.

Players' Visit Recalls Wedding With Uel Lamkin as Best Man

When Mr. and Mrs. Jess Coffer arrived at the State Teachers College this morning, it recalled to students of the College that a company of players had come to Maryville to present two classic comedies at the College tonight and tomorrow night. But to Uel W. Lamkin, president of the College, it meant a reunion with old friends.

The Coffer-Miller company, composed of seven persons, will present Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer" at 8 o'clock tonight, and Mariveau's "Love in Livery" at the same hour tomorrow night.

But, back to the friendship which has existed between Mr. Lamkin and Mr. and Mrs. Coffer. This friendship was formed in the summer of 1915 when the three of them were with the Redpath-Vawter Chautauqua Company. Mr. Lamkin gave a lecture on education in the afternoon, and Mr. Coffer and Miss Martha Miller were members of a company which presented a play at night.

One hot night the play was presented in Marshall, Mo. True to his daily custom, Mr. Lamkin waited over and traveled to the next town with the play company.

Sometime between the end of Mr. Lamkin's lecture and the beginning of the play, Jess Coffer and Mr. Lamkin took a stroll. According to the former, they walked around the square in Marshall just five times before Mr. Lamkin persuaded the actor that matrimony was the only sea on which to sail.

The next night the play was to be given in Centralia. Sometime during the day Mr. Lamkin paid a hurry-up call to the recorder's office in Columbia, and sometime later Miss Martha Miller became Mrs. Jess Coffer. The ceremony was performed in the big chautauqua tent, and the story is that, next to the bride and groom, President Lamkin was the "big squeeze" at the weddin'.

"And that's one reason why we're so glad to be in Maryville," Mrs. Coffer said this morning. "Another reason is that we were accorded a wonderful reception here five years ago, and naturally we are glad of the opportunity to appear again before a Maryville audience."

Seats for the two plays are selling well. Reserved seats may be secured at Kuchs Brothers until 6 p. m., both days, and after that at the entrance to the College auditorium.

then started again for Berlin, but Chamberlin again lost direction. He passed south of Berlin and landed at Forst, 75 miles southeast of Berlin, and the flight was over.

Cottbus a "Joke Town".

Washington, June 6.—Cottbus, the town where Chamberlin and Levine went after being forced down today, is one of those towns that German vaudeville comedians use for their gags.

Its chief claim to fame previous to today was its cake and a special sausage.

Mauretania Gets a Thrill.

London, June 6.—A radio from the Mauretania describes the thrill aboard the steamer when some 350 miles from Land's End they saw a plane approaching as a speck in the sky.

"Hats, books and umbrellas were tossed in the air as the plane descended within 150 feet of the ship's masts," says the radio, "and its number dispelled all doubt as to whose machine it was. Then the cheering became frantic.

"As though out for an afternoon joyride, Chamberlin calmly made a complete circuit of the ship. He cooly examined her name and then went off to the eastward at terrific speed. Within three minutes the machine was out of sight. The engine was working magnificently."

Only Praise From Lindbergh.

Aboard U. S. S. Memphis, en route to Washington, June 6.—Captain Lindbergh awoke today to find his nonstop distance flight record broken by Clarence Chamberlin and Charles Levine.

Lindbergh had only praise for his rival fliers, who passed within a few miles of the Memphis yesterday but were not sighted from the cruiser.

Omaha, June 6.—Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Chamberlin received reports of the flight of their son at the Associated Press office in Omaha yesterday. Since early yesterday morning they sat by a machine, watching for news from their son. When "Mauretania reports seeing Chamberlin off French coast," came in letter by letter, Mrs. Chamberlin leaped to her feet and said:

"He's made it! He's made it!"

Mrs. William Argo Dies Near Skidmore

Native of Nodaway County Succumbs at Her Home This Morning—Ill for Six Months.

Mrs. William Argo, about 55 years old, a native of Nodaway County, died at 4:15 o'clock this morning at her home, five miles northwest of Skidmore. She had been ill of heart trouble about six months, but her condition did not become critical until last Friday evening. The funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Mrs. Argo was born in the Burr Oak neighborhood near Skidmore. Surviving are her husband and six children: Virgil of Horace, Kan., who is expected Wednesday night; Alta, Kansas City, Ivan, Merlin and James, at home, and Myrtle, who is attending school at Hays, Kan.

Have Dinner Guests.

Mrs. Florence Haller and children, Guy Reece and Marion, Wilcox, entertained at dinner yesterday for Mr. and Mrs. Elge Lawson and daughter, and Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Lawson, Harmony; Mr. and Mrs. Ernest McDowell and son, Charles; and Mr. and Mrs. Doyle King and children, Ravenwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Gus Shell and son, Edison, Wilcox, were Maryville visitors this afternoon.

Pons-Winnecke Comet and Eclipses of Sun and Moon to be Visible in Sky During Month of June

By ISRAEL KLEIN
Science Editor, NEA Service.

June will be an auspicious month for science and superstition.

The sun will be darkened, the moon will be obliterated and a great ball of fire, with an enormous tail, will appear to threaten us in the sky.

Years ago special prayers went up, people shut themselves in and others even committed suicide under the awesome spell of any of these events. Now, we prepare differently for these as great spectacles of scientific significance.

The darkening of the sun and obliteration of the moon are eclipses of these great bodies in space, and the great ball of fire we know now as a comet.

The first event of the three to occur this month is the eclipse of the moon. The earth will come between the sun and the moon, completely shutting off direct sunlight from our satellite. This will occur in the night of June 14-15, and will be seen all over the western hemisphere.

First the moon will cut through the outer shadow, or penumbra, of the earth and will slowly cross into the umbra or a dark shadow, which it will reach at 1:43 a. m. eastern time, June 15. For the next hour and a half the moon's eclipse will increase until it will be totally eclipsed at 3:13. This totality will last 21 minutes, after which the moon will move slowly out of the earth's shadow, only to be obstructed from our view by the coming dawn.

Comet Comes Next.

A week later the days becomes the longest of the year, with the beginning of summer, at 5:22 on the morning of June 22.

Almost at the same time, if we happen to be up and point a weaklensed telescope toward the rising sun, we may be able to detect a stranger in the sky, coming toward us. It is the Pons-Winnecke comet, discovered in 1819 by a doorkeeper at the observatory of Marseilles and since then noticed every six years.

Comets are a strange lot of heavenly bodies, each a collection of fiery meteors and dust particles grouped together by some sort of electric attraction and whirling around the sun at an enormous speed and over a huge ellipse, or flat circle. Some of them have tails of thin gas, so thin that we on earth don't feel their presence, even when we might be passing right through them.

The Pons-Winnecke comet is approaching us at the rate of 24 miles a second, faster than the earth is traveling, and on June 26 it will come nearest to us—a distance of 3,600,000 miles.

If we stay up until 3 in the morning of June 26, eastern time, we may see the comet perhaps without aid of a telescope, but barely visible in the sky almost directly above us. It will be moving southeast almost as fast as the moon seems to move, but the presence of a waning moon at the same time may drown out the view of the comet.

Sun's Eclipse June 29.

Of far more importance to science, although invisible in the United States, will be the sun's eclipse on the morning of June 29. As the sun rises that morning, the moon will get between it and the earth so as to cast a circular shadow 50 miles in diameter, moving northeast acrosst the earth.

This shadow will start a little west of the Bay of Biscay, cross the Atlantic and pass over the populous section of Lancashire in England.

It will proceed along the length of Norway, the north of Sweden and Lapland and over the desolate region of the Arctic ocean north of the Siberian coast. It will go on over the eastern end of Siberia and leave the earth at sunset at the tip of Alaska.

Scientists have been preparing for this event for a whole year. Some American scientists are going to points in Norway to set up instruments by which they may study the sun's corona, the great prominences of fire that can be seen favorably only when the moon covers the disk of the sun. They want to know what materials form it and exactly how.

For this long preparation the scientists will have no longer than 50 seconds to study this phenomenon. That's the longest the eclipse will last in totality. In England, where British scientists will study the eclipse, it will last only 22 seconds.

But enough material, it is hoped, will be gained to reward the scientists for their long preparations.

Hoping that it's a clear day!

Ownership a Pagan Idea, Says Musgrave

Man Is Only the Steward of What Is God's Minister Explains.—Illustrated in War.

Man "owns" nothing he possesses. God is the actual owner, and Man is only His steward.

This was the theme of the Rev. R. E. Musgrave, pastor of the First Christian Church, preaching a sermon yesterday morning contrasting Paganism and Christianity.

"Unconsciously," he pointed out, "we are influenced by Pagan philosophy. The pagan held the theory that man was absolute owner of the world. God, to the pagan, was impersonal, could not own anything.

"To the Christian mind, God is a personality, the Creator of all things, and owns the world. Man is only a steward of what he possesses, and not the owner. Paganism left no place for stewardship.

"While Christian philosophy holds that man is not the owner but only the steward, yet there are many who talk, act and believe that they are absolute owners of that to which they hold title. When the World War broke, there were men everywhere who thought they owned what was in their possession, but soon found that the government could take charge of everything man held. We were made to eat rye bread, drink coffee without sugar; we had eatless, meatless and wheatless days. We learned that even the Government could take possession of everything we owned'. If the Government can do such things, what about the ownership of God?''

The Old Testament writers, Mr. Musgrave said, understood clearly God's ownership. He quoted for example: "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof, the world and they that dwell therein." "For every beast of the forest is mine and the cattle upon a thousand hills, I know all the birds of the mountains and all the wild beasts of the fields are mine and if I were hungry I would not tell thee, for the world is mine and the fullness thereof."

"Man is at best, only a steward," the pastor added. "A very large portion of the teachings of Jesus was upon this very subject. Sixteen of His thirty-eight parables had to do with the right or wrong use of money. One verse in six in Matthew, Mark and Luke have to do with the stewardship of money and property. Before we can be good stewards we must replace the last vestige of pagan philosophy with Christian teaching.'"

Art Exhibit at the College Is Returned

The paintings which have been on exhibit in the new library at the State Teachers College for the past three weeks were boxed Saturday and sent to the different collections from which they came. The exhibit here represented paintings from collections in Kansas City, St. Louis, Chicago, New York, and other places.

The works were brought here by the 1927 graduating class for the purpose of selecting one for a gift to the school. "Unconquered," by Miss Delle Miller, was selected by the class, which is now contemplating buying another picture from the group by Birger Sandzen. Sandzen is an artist of the Middle West and is professor of the art school at Lindsburg, Kan. The paintings which he had here were "The Timberline Lakes," "By the Sea," and "Hidden Valley." His method of work and use of colors is one of his own. He uses the paint very heavily and uses very rich coloring, a peculiar shade of red being dominant.

Special mention should be given to the Kansas City Society of Artists, of which Miss Miller is president, for the collection which was here. It was largely through her efforts that the pictures, representing American Art and especially western art, were brought here.

One rather singularly feature about this exhibit was the fact that the majority of artists represented were women. As a general rule, one thinks of Artists, for the most part, as men, but this exhibit was different from others.

Merle Selecman Home.

Merle E. Selecman, director of information at the State Teachers College, returned yesterday from Evanston, Ill., where he has been attending the Medill School of Journalism, Northwestern University, since last September. He completed his work for a Master's degree. He resumed his work at the College today.

Miss Gray in School.

Miss Miriam Gray of the graduating class of 1925 at the State Teachers College, is now taking advanced work in the art department. She came back from Grand Island, Neb., where she has been supervisor of art for the past year.

Attend Basket Dinner at B. J.

Several people from Maryville attended the basket dinner held at the Methodist church in Burlington Junction and the services held in the afternoon, yesterday. Rev. W. S. Gaugh, Rev. and Mrs. Lane Douglas, Rev. and Mrs. Woodhull and family, William Gaugh, Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Scott and children, Miss Audrey Stilwait, Mr. and Mrs. W .S. Frankum and Wilber and Wilma Frankum, Miss Mary Barber, Helen Gaugh.

The Rev. Father Thos. E. Parle of Humboldt, Iowa, will arrive this evening to be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John Graham, and Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Parle. While here he will attend the ordination to the priesthood of Ernest C. Graham at Conception Abbely Tuesday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. James Middleton and daughter, Opal, motored to Tarkio yesterday to spend the day with W. E. McKinney and family, and other friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Ora Sayler, Mrs. Mary Wray and Mrs. F. B. Monroe and daughter, Helen Joy, of Hopkins visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Wray yesterday.

Miss Ruth Alexander of Breckenridge registered at the college recently.

Mrs. A. C. Monroe, Mrs. Ora Sayler, Mrs. Mary Wray and Mrs. Fred Monroe and daughter, Helen Joy, of Hopkins were Maryville visitors Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Masters of Omaha visited in Maryville yesterday with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Masters, and other relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Foster of Des Moines, Ia., spent the week end with the former's father, D. T. Foster, and his sister, Mrs. W. O. Garrett, and family.

Mr. and Mrs. George Jay of Shenandoah, Ia., were guests yesterday of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Beattie.

Thomas Graham and Father Odilo of Conception Junction were in Maryville today.

Uel W. Lamkin, resident of the State Teachers College, returned to Maryville yesterday from South Dakota, where he gave the commencement addresses last week at Pierre and Aberdeen.

Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Peery had as their guests over the week-end Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Gilluly and daughter, Miss Marian Gilluly, of Trenton.

British "War Dogs" in China

"God's Approval the Great Aim"—Prather

Worth First Must Be Proven, As Lindbergh's Was, Baptist Minister Says.

Seeking of God's approval is a worthy aim, but such approval can be given only after worth is proven, the Rev. Guy L. Prather told his congregation yesterday morning at the First Baptist Church. He was preaching from a text which he found in Second Timothy, 2:15.

"God's approval," said the Reverend Mr. Prather, "is a worthy aim. It depends upon tested and proven worth. Every defect and every excellence stands forth in his sight. He sees what we are as well as what we express. Through the years the test continue. We write our records daily in Bible knowledge, in religious habits, in faith, in love, in resistence, in endurance, in poverty, in riches. Some prove unworthy and must be reprimanded and expelled, as Annanias and Sapphira.

"Approval is given after worth is proven. Lindbergh was just as worthy when he left New York as when he landed in Paris. But he was acclaimed only when he had accomplished his feat. Others may not always accept our records. We may be misunderstood and unappreciated. In Jesus were the extremes of worth and disapproval. Yet God most highly honored and exalted him. If worthy, God will in due season give his approval.

"God's approval," the minister continued, "is according to real worth. No one else can prove his estimate false. There is no higher authority to reverse his approval. It is true and final. Dr. Cook claimed to have discovered the North Pole, but later records proved his claims false and his honors were stripped from him and given to Commodore Peary, to whom they rightfully belonged.

"God's approval can be read in his word. It can be felt in the heart. It will be heard when we meet him face to face. Kings and Presidents have personally decorated Lindbergh. Our own president has approved. But soon he will personally express a nation's approval and bestow the medal of honor.

"We seek divine approval through skillful workmanship, rightly handling God's word of truth. This requires that we know it in its various parts, characteristics, characters, teachings; and that we rightly apply it in proportion in the whole round of Christian truth. We must not neglect some truths and over-emphasize others. We must give its high idealism about God and man, as well as its practical uses in everyday life. We must apply it to the child, the youth, the man, the aged, and in all the complicated relations of life; as a skillful physician diagnoses a case and prescribes the cure.

"Such a task and such a motive call for diligence. The Greek word, translated 'study' in our authorized version mean 'haste,' 'be diligent.'

"Our greatest enterprise," Mr. Prather concluded, "is the Lord's business. Here the world has its greatest needs. Here is God's message to meet the need: 'We must work the works of Him that sent us while it is day.'"

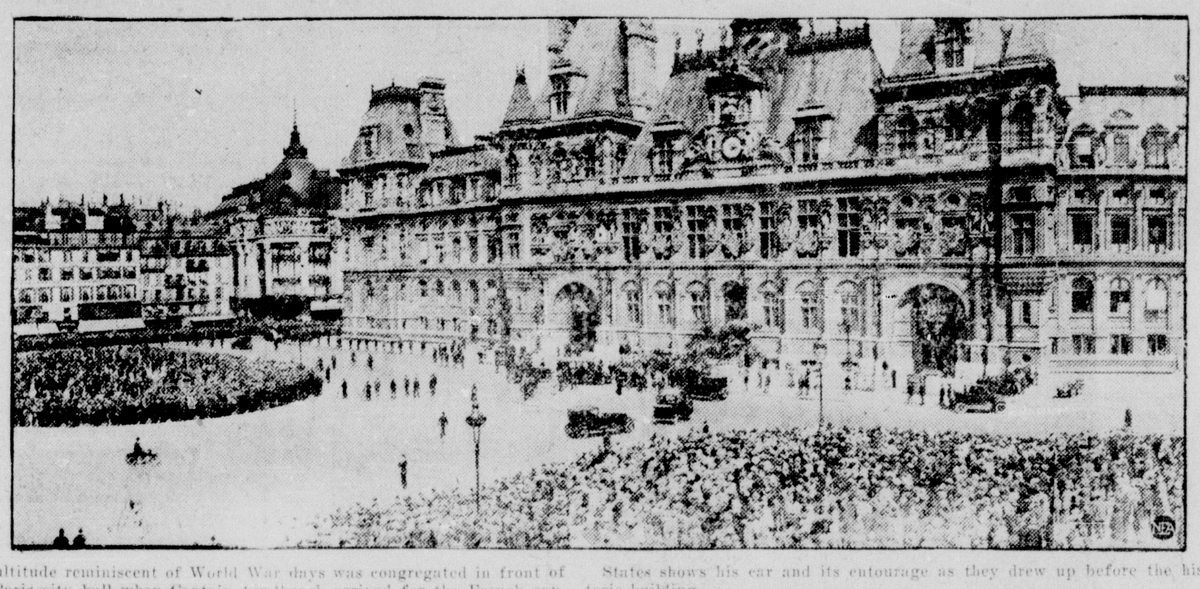
A CAPITAL'S ACCLAIM



A multitude reminiscent of World War days was congregated in front of the Paris city hall when Captain Lindbergh arrived for the French capital's formal welcome. This first photo of the event to reach the United States shows his car and its entourage as they drew up before the historic building.

HIS BEGINNING INAUSPICIOUS

A SURPRISING CHANGE

In Air He Became Cool, Self-Possessed, Daringly Courageous.—Learned Parachute Jumping.

By MORRIS DE HAVEN TRACY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
(Copyright, 1927 by the United Press.)

CHAPTER SIX

When Charles A. Lindbergh arrived at the Lincoln Aircraft Company's offices in Lincoln, Nebraska, late in 1921, and enrolled as an aviation student, they thought so little of his chance of ever becoming anything much in the way of an aviator that no record was kept of the date of his arrival.

Apparently the immediate impression was of a sort of a "Merton of the Movies" person who had dreamed of flying and finally came with enough money to pay for some instruction, but who never would do much more.

"He blushed when he came to us in a way that would have done credit to any high school girl," said Page.

He was turned over to some instructor, and no one knows just who it was, to be taught a bit about airplanes.

He was given the ground training, which consisted of a study of airplane construction and explanation of the theory and mechanics of flying.

He was not talkative, was very quiet and unassuming, but when he got into the pilot's nest, what a difference there was," said Page telling of this training period.

A Changed Man In Air.

"As soon as he was permitted to take a plane aloft," everyone began to notice him. He was a changed man when he got his hands on the controls. He wasn't bashful or blushing any more, and he didn't appear gawky. He made airplanes behave like no beginner ever did before.

"He was never reckless, that boy, but daringly courageous.

"Pretty soon everyone around the field was talking about the kid being one of a few men born naturally adapted to flying. It took his flight to Paris to convince the world that here was a remarkable flier but we knew long before he finished his course at the flying school here."

Lindbergh left the flying school not when he had finished the complete course but when he felt that he had learned all there was to be learned there, just as he left college when he felt he wasn't making any progress. Up to the time he left the flying school he had not been permitted to fly alone.

Immediately Lindbergh looked around for an airplane of his own. He picked up one at an army sale—an elderly biplane—and took it to Lincoln where he fixed it up and began running an air-taxi service. He charged the farmers and visitors to Lincoln so much per minute of flying.

Made Few Acquaintances.

He made few acquaintances, and those who did know him in those days recall his chiefly for two things, his quiet, reticent disposition and his interest in aviation.

He shared a room at the Harry E. Peckham home in Lincoln with another embryo aviator, named Ball. When he flew to Paris Lincoln people searched so deeply for "Lindbergh lore," that they finally unearthed the place in the Sanitarium garage where Lindbergh had space for his motorcycles, and it has become a sort of shrine.

Harry Ellis of Lincoln, also interested in flying, was one of his closest friends there, and it was through Ellis that Lindbergh came to mix parachute jumping with his study of flying.

"I had done some balloon work myself and had made parachute drops," Ellis said. "He was making great progress in flying and wanted to drop.

"I thought he had plenty of nerve although he didn't have much to say and didn't make any boasts. He would get me talking about parachute jumping and would question me on every little point. He was getting all the information he could.

Parachute Dropping Natural.

"Pretty soon I learned he was going down to the Twentieth street flying field and dropping all over the place.

"He had, it seemed, got all the information he could from me about parachutes and then arranged to learn the business for himself. Soon everyone was talking about the perfect manner in which he handled himself in his drops. It was just natural to him."

Lindbergh tired of Lincoln and finally gave up his air-taxi business there, got into his plane and flew back home to Little Falls, Minnesota. It was in Little Falls that he had dreamed of flying during his youth and those who have dreamed in childhood may imagine how the day in 1922 when Charlie Lindbergh came flying his own plane into the old home town, was for him a thrill only surpassed by his arrival in Paris on May 21.

The townspeople were immediately curious over this quiet, silent lad and his airship. They gathered at its quickly built hangar to see it and Charlie began doing an air-taxi business at home once more. Not all of the townspeople would take a chance riding with Charlie Lindbergh but many of them had their first ride through the skies in his old, army biplane.

Judge Dismisses Jury in R. V. Thompson Case

Gallatin, Mo., June 6.—The jury deciding the fate of Dr. R. V. Thompson, former cashier of the Farmers Exchange Bank, Gallatin, was dismissed late Friday afternoon by Judge Ira D. Beals in the Daviess county circuit court, after the jury reported it was hopelessly deadlocked. The ballot stood at 9 to 3, but no statement was made as whether the majority was for conviction or acquittal on the charge of false entry in the bank's books, the first of seven grand jury indictments against Thompson.

Two "Fighting Editors," 1 British, the Other American, Clash Over Situation in China

Editor's Note: Tientsin has two famous "fighting editors" who are known throughout China. They are H. G. W. Woodhead of the Peking & Tientsin Times, and Charles James Fox of the North China Star. Woodhead is British, Dr. Fox is American, and the product of their typewriters brings memories of those heated days when Greeley scrawled philippics in New York.

The United Press asked these editors to give their ideas on "America in China" for parallel presentation. The result appears below. Woodhead's article was written both for the United Press and for his own paper, and it has been cut somewhat to conform with space requirements, but it is believed the full sense has been retained. Dr. Fox's article appears as written specially for the United Press.

By CHARLES JAMES FOX
(Editor, The North China Star)

Two of the numerous causes of the present quite unsatisfactory condition of Sino-American official relations ought to be especially emphasized at this time, in the hope that publicity will bring the relief we all desire. First, the Protocol Powers in Peking are attempting to function as a Little League of Nations in which one or more of the predominating powers try to use the organization to further their own individual ends. The United States is not a member of the League of Nations, and from a legal, as well as from a political standpoint, she should not regard herself as a member of Peking's League of Protocolians. The Protocol of 1901 was never ratified by the United States Senate and therefore has not in American law the status of a treaty.

Furthermore, just as foreign statesmen failed to understand that President Wilson could not bind the United States to the League, or to League policies, so foreign diplomats in Peking fail to appreciate that the American Minister, however good his intentions may be, cannot bind the American Government, or especially the American nation, to any policy of joint action in this country, such as armed intervention to which the consent of the American Congress would really be necessary. Mr. MacMurray tries hard to work with his Protocal colleagues and sometimes even to lead them in the direction Great Britain or some other power, wishes to go, but unfortunately, or otherwise, Mr. MacMurray cannot deliver the goods and gets criticized here and at home, both for trying and for his failure.

Second, the present "Bolshevik Peril" out here that is causing such fear, feigned or otherwise among several of the Proctol Le[illegible] is regarded as a joke, or "bu[illegible]" by a large section of the American public. The S. O. S. of the legation on the Red Peril, throughout China in general and in the Legation Quarter in particular, has apparently been received in the United States in the same spirit in which the American public laughed at the famous "Red Flag" on the White House warning issued by former Secretary of State Hughes several years ago.

From the best information I am able to obtain it was the American Minister who took the most active part in inducing the Chinese in Peking to raid the Russian Embassy, with the British Minister, the main instigator remaining quietly behind the scenes, and the Dutch Minister, the Dean of the Diplomatic Corps, giving the actual permission. The Japanese Minister is said to have been quite luke-warm on the proposition.

But, however effective it may have been in Peking diplomacy or politics the Red Peril is not taken seriously in America, according to all indications received out here.

By H. G. W. WOODHEAD, C. B. E.
(Editor, The Peking & Tientsin Times).

The American Administration is less concerned with the situation in China than with the prospects of the Republican Party in the Presidential campaign of 1928. For two years or more the American people have been "doped" regarding the China situation. They have been led to believe that the present upheaval is a genuinely nationalist movement, free from Bolshevik influences, and that "foreign imperialism," and the "unequal treaties" lie at the root of China's troubles. And so we have witnessed in Washington, a policy exasperating in its flabbiness and indecision. It seems, indeed, as if a Washington journal which suggests that "as soon as the Americans can be withdrawn from China they should be withdrawn," reflects the views of those who at the moment control America's foreign policy. It is not surprising, in the circumstances, that those Americans in China, who imagined that they were living and pursuing their daily avocations under treaty rights, and the protection of their government, have become indignant at the latter's passivity. They perhaps find it difficult to understand why the Administration should adopt a strong hand in Nicaragua, where there have been no such series of outrages as have occurred in China, while apparently regarding wholesale evacuation as the only policy in this country.

Americans — business and professional men, missionaries, etc., owe the fact that they have been able to reside and pursue their lawful avocations in China entirely to the so-called "unequal treaties." But, unlike Great Britain and France, they did not secure these treaties by force, but by semi-parasitism. Except for Mukden and Antung—the opening of which to foreign trade was provided for in the Sino-American Commercial Treaty of 1901, not a single one of the fifty towns in which foreigners are permitted to reside and trade was opened by virtue of an agreement between America and China. American envoys followed in the wake of the victorious armies and fleets of other powers, and, without sharing in the risks and hazards of war, secured from the Chinese the same (or similar) privileges as those which had been won by other governments.

Canton, Shanghai, Tientsin and Hankow were all opened to foreign (including American) residence and trade by British treaties; Nanking by a French treaty. American business, missionary, educational and other interests in China have been founded and built up on rights secured by Britain and France over eighty years ago. And though a great majority of American business men appreciate this, and resent the pharasaical attitude of many of their instructed countrymen who boast of their government's righteousness in refraining from demanding concessions, or wresting the right of residence and trade from China by force, "an influential group of pacifist missionaries"—to use Dr. Allen C. Hutcheson's phrase—has actively participated in the anti-British agitation of the past two years.

The American brand of Hermit-crab not only avails itself of the habitations prepared by others, but reviles those who made the use of these habitations possible.

And now that these habitations are attacked, the inmates ejected, and the contents looted, the American Government refuses to be a party to any coercive measures. In effect, history it to repeat itself. Americans must withdraw from China unless they can recover their rights as the result of the action of other powers. It is no wonder that from Hankow and Shanghai, from Peking and Tientsin, protests have poured into Washington against this betrayal.

U. S. Supreme Court Adjourns to October

Term Closed Today Notable For Attempts To Speed Justice.—Naval Oil Lease Cancellation Upheld.

Washington, June 6.—The United States Supreme Court convened today for its final session of the current term. It meets at noon, hands downs a number of decisions and orders in its always unsuccessful attempt to clear its docket of panding cases, and adjourns until next October.

The court has disposed of more than 900 of the 1,150 or more cases docketed during the term which started last October, including many important cases which set new precedents in the law.

Most of the nine justices of the court will leave in the next few days for their summer homes in cooler, quieter locations.

Chief Justice William Howard Taft will go to his place at Pointer-au-Pic, Quebec, Canada, on the north shore of the St. Lawrence river. Justice Willis Van Devanter will go to his place in the Thousand Islands region on the same river; Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, 86-year-old dean of the supreme bench both in years and service, will go to Beverly, Mass., and Justice Brandeis to Wood's Hole, Mass. Others plan to leave the capital for most or all of the summer.

This term of the court has been marked by new attempts to speed justice, especially on criminal appeals which in many cases heretofore have delayed imposition of sentences for months and years. The court now sees to it that the decisions are made in a few weeks. The court has also speeded up the dispatch of mandates, making its decisions effective in 25 days after the announcement, instead of 40 days.

Among the important decisions were those cancelling the Elk Hills naval oil reserve leases, upholding congress' power to require production of evidence, affirming the president's power to remove postmasters and others statutory officials without consent of the senate, approving the Volstead Act limitation on liquor prescriptions and the Harrison anti-narcotic act, invalidating the New York State "Anti-ticket-Scalping law," affirming the Virgin Law for sterilization of imbeciles, and upholding the principle of city zoning.

Art Exhibit at the College Is Returned

The paintings which have been on exhibit in the new library at the State Teachers College for the past three weeks were boxed Saturday and sent to the different collections from which they came. The exhibit here represented paintings from collections in Kansas City, St. Louis, Chicago, New York, and other places.

The works were brought here by the 1927 graduating class for the purpose of selecting one for a gift to the school. "Unconquered," by Miss Delle Miller, was selected by the class, which is now contemplating buying another picture from the group by Birger Sandzen. Sandzen is an artist of the Middle West and is professor of the art school at Lindsburg, Kan. The paintings which he had here were "The Timberline Lakes," "By the Sea," and "Hidden Valley." His method of work and use of colors is one of his own. He uses the paint very heavily and uses very rich coloring, a peculiar shade of red being dominant.

Special mention should be given to the Kansas City Society of Artists, of which Miss Miller is president, for the collection which was here. It was largely through her efforts that the pictures, representing American Art and especially western art, were brought here.

One rather singularly feature about this exhibit was the fact that the majority of artists represented were women. As a general rule, one thinks of Artists, for the most part, as men, but this exhibit was different from others.

Merle Selecman Home.

Merle E. Selecman, director of information at the State Teachers College, returned yesterday from Evanston, Ill., where he has been attending the Medill School of Journalism, Northwestern University, since last September. He completed his work for a Master's degree. He resumed his work at the College today.

Miss Gray in School.

Miss Miriam Gray of the graduating class of 1925 at the State Teachers College, is now taking advanced work in the art department. She came back from Grand Island, Neb., where she has been supervisor of art for the past year.

Attend Basket Dinner at B. J.

Several people from Maryville attended the basket dinner held at the Methodist church in Burlington Junction and the services held in the afternoon, yesterday. Rev. W. S. Woodhull of Maryville preached in the afternoon. Among those attending were: Mrs. M. Rittenour, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Gaugh, Rev. and Mrs. Lane Douglas, Rev. and Mrs. Woodhull and family, William Gaugh, Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Scott and children, Miss Audrey Stiwalt, Mr. and Mrs. W .S. Frankum and Wilber and Wilma Frankum, Miss Mary Barber, Helen Gaugh.

The Rev. Father Thos. E. Parle of Humboldt, Iowa, will arrive this evening to be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John Graham, and Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Parle. While here he will attend the ordination to the priesthood of Ernest G. Graham at Conception Abbely Tuesday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. James Middleton and daughter, Opal, motored to Tarkio yesterday to spend the day with W. E. McKinney and family, and other friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Ora Sayler, Mrs. Mary Wray and Mrs. F. B. Monroe and daughter, Helen Joy, of Hopkins visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Wray yesterday.

Miss Ruth Alexander of Breckenridge registered at the college recently.

Mrs. A. C. Monroe, Mrs. Ora Sayler, Mrs. Mary Wray and Mrs. Fred Monroe and daughter, Helen Joy, of Hopkins were Maryville visitors Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Masters of Omaha visited in Maryville yesterday with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Masters, and other relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Foster of Des Moines, Ia., spent the week end with the former's father, D. T. Foster, and his sister, Mrs. W. O. Garrett, and family.

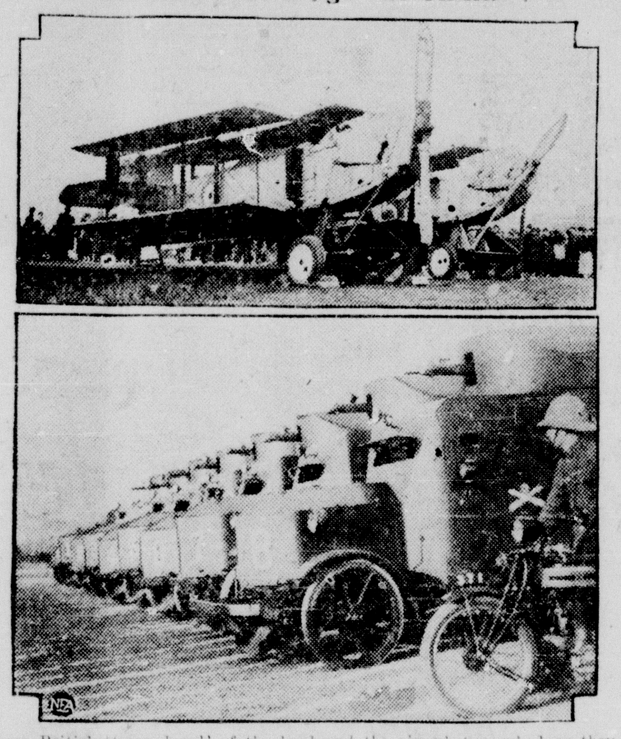
Mr. and Mrs. George Jay of Shenandoah, Ia., were guests yesterday of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Beattie.

Thomas Graham and Father Odilo of Conception Junction were in Maryville today.

Uel W. Lamkin, resident of the State Teachers College, returned to Maryville yesterday from South Dakota, where he gave the commencement addresses last week at Pierre and Aberdeen.

Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Peery had as their guests over the week-end Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Gilluly and daughter, Miss Marian Gilluly, of Trenton.

British "War Dogs" in China



These British "war dogs" of the land and the air, photographed as they were delivered at Shanghai, may see service in North China soon. Britain is preparing to send a force of airplanes and other war paraphernalia from Shanghai and Tientsin because of alarm over the Nationalist drive into Marshal Chang Tso-lin's North China realm. In the upper photo are two huge military biplanes; below, a forbidding battery of armored trucks.

"God's Approval the Great Aim"—Prather

Worth First Must Be Proven, As Lindbergh's Was, Baptist Minister Says.

Seeking of God's approval is a worthy aim, but such approval can be given only after worth is proven, the Rev. Guy L. Prather told his congregation yesterday morning at the First Baptist Church. He was preaching from a text which he found in Second Timothy, 2:15.

"God's approval," said the Reverend Mr. Prather, "is a worthy aim. It depends upon tested and proven worth. Every defect and every excellence stands forth in his sight. He sees what we are as well as what we express. Through the years the test continue. We write our records daily in Bible knowledge, in religious habits, in faith, in love, in resistence, in endurance, in poverty, in riches. Some prove unworthy and must be reprimanded and expelled, as Annanias and Sapphira.

"Approval is given after worth is proven. Lindbergh was just as worthy when he left New York as when he landed in Paris. But he was acclaimed only when he had accomplished his feat. Others may not always accept our records. We may be misunderstood and unappreciated. In Jesus were the extremes of worth and disapproval. Yet God most highly honored and exalted him. If worthy, God will in due season give his approval.

"God's approval," the minister continued, "is according to real worth. No one else can prove his estimate false. There is no higher authority to reverse his approval. It is true and final. Dr. Cook claimed to have discovered the North Pole, but later records proved his claims false and his honors were stripped from him and given to Commodore Peary, to whom they rightfully belonged.

"God's approval can be read in his word. It can be felt in the heart. It will be heard when we meet him face to face. Kings and Presidents have personally decorated Lindbergh. Our own president has approved. But soon he will personally express a nation's approval and bestow the medal of honor.

"We seek divine approval through skillful workmanship, rightly handling God's word of truth. This requires that we know it in its various parts, characteristics, characters, teachings; and that we rightly apply it in proportion to the whole round of Christian truth. We must not neglect some truths and over-emphasize others. We must give its high idealism about God and man, as well as its practical uses in everyday life. We must apply it to the child, the youth, the man, the aged, and in all the complicated relations of life; as a skillful physician diagnoses a case and prescribes the cure.

"Such a task and such a motive call for diligence. The Greek word, translated 'study' in our authorized version mean 'haste,' 'be diligent.'

"Our greatest enterprise," Mr. Prather concluded, "is the Lord's business. Here the world has its greatest needs. Here is God's message to meet the need: 'We must work the works of Him that sent us while it is day.'"

HIS BEGINNING INAUSPICIOUS

A SURPRISING CHANGE

In Air He Became Cool, Self-Possessed, Daringly Courageous.—Learned Parachute Jumping.

CHAPTER SIX

When Charles A. Lindbergh arrived at the Lincoln Aircraft Company's offices in Lincoln, Nebraska, late in 1921, and enrolled as an aviation student, they thought so little of his chance of ever becoming anything much in the way of an aviator that no record was kept of the date of his arrival.

Apparently the immediate impression was of a sort of a "Merton of the Movies" person who had dreamed of flying and finally came with enough money to pay for some instruction, but who never would do much more.

"He blushed when he came to us in a way that would have done credit to any high school girl," said Page.

He was turned over to some instructor, and no one knows just who it was, to be taught a bit about airplanes.

He was given the ground training, which consisted of a study of airplane construction and explanation of the theory and mechanics of flying.

He was not talkative, was very quiet and unassuming, but when he got into the pilot's nest, what a difference there was," said Page telling of this training period.

A Changed Man In Air.

"As soon as he was permitted to take a plane aloft," everyone began to notice him. He was a changed man when he got his hands on the controls. He wasn't bashful or blushing any more, and he didn't appear gawky. He made airplanes behave like no beginner ever did before.

"He was never reckless, that boy, but daringly courageous.

"Pretty soon everyone around the field was talking about the kid being one of a few men born naturally adapted to flying. It took his flight to Paris to convince the world that here was a remarkable flier but we knew long before he finished his course at the flying school here."

Lindbergh left the flying school not when he had finished the complete course but when he felt that he had learned all there was to be learned there, just as he left college when he felt he wasn't making any progress. Up to the time he left the flying school he had not been permitted to fly alone.

Immediately Lindbergh looked around for an airplane of his own. He picked up one at an army sale—an elderly biplane—and took it to Lincoln where he fixed it up and began running an air-taxi service. He charged the farmers and visitors to Lincoln so much per minute of flying.

Made Few Acquaintances.

He made few acquaintances, and those who did know him in those days recall his chiefly for two things, his quiet, reticent disposition and his interest in aviation.

He shared a room at the Harry E. Peckham home in Lincoln with another embryo aviator, named Ball. When he flew to Paris Lincoln people searched so deeply for "Lindbergh lore," that they finally unearthed the place in the Sanitarium garage where Lindbergh had space for his motorcycles, and it has become a sort of shrine.

Harry Ellis of Lincoln, also interested in flying, was one of his closest friends there, and it was through Ellis that Lindbergh came to mix parachute jumping with his study of flying.

"I had done some balloon work myself and had made parachute drops," Ellis said. "He was making great progress in flying and wanted to drop.

"I thought he had plenty of nerve although he didn't have much to say and didn't make any boasts. He would get me talking about parachute jumping and would question me on every little point. He was getting all the information he could.

Parachute Dropping Natural.

"Pretty soon I learned he was going down to the Twentieth street flying field and dropping all over the place.

"He had, it seemed, got all the information he could from me about parachutes and then arranged to learn the business for himself. Soon everyone was talking about the perfect manner in which he handled himself in his drops. It was just natural to him."

Lindbergh tired of Lincoln and finally gave up his air-taxi business there, got into his plane and flew back home to Little Falls, Minnesota. It was in Little Falls that he had dreamed of flying during his youth and those who have dreamed in childhood may imagine how the day in 1922 when Charlie Lindbergh came flying his own plane into the old home town, was for him a thrill only surpassed by his arrival in Paris on May 21.

The townspeople were immediately curious over this quiet, silent lad and his airship. They gathered at its quickly built hangar to see it and Charlie began doing an air-taxi business at home once more. Not all of the townspeople would take a chance riding with Charlie Lindbergh but many of them had their first ride through the skies in his old army biplane.

Judge Dismisses Jury in R. V. Thompson Case

Gallatin, Mo., June 6.—The jury deciding the fate of Dr. R. V. Thompson, former cashier of the Farmers Exchange Bank, Gallatin, was dismissed late Friday afternoon by Judge Ira D. Beals in the Daviess county circuit court, after the jury reported it was hopelessly deadlocked. The ballot stood at 9 to 3, but no statement was made as whether the majority was for conviction or acquittal on the charge of false entry in the bank's books, the first of seven grand jury indictments against Thompson.

Two "Fighting Editors," 1 British, the Other American, Clash Over Situation in China

Editor's Note: Tientsin has two famous "fighting editors" who are known throughout China. They are H. G. W. Woodhead of the Peking & Tientsin Times, and Charles James Fox of the North China Star. Woodhead is British, Dr. Fox is American, and the product of their typewriters brings memories of those heated days when Greeley scrawled philippics in New York.

The United Press asked these editors to give their ideas on "America in China" for parallel presentation. The result appears below. Woodhead's article was written both for the United Press and for his own paper, and it has been cut somewhat to conform with space requirements, but it is believed the full sense has been retained. Dr. Fox's article appears as written specially for the United Press.

By CHARLES JAMES FOX
(Editor, The North China Star)

Two of the numerous causes of the present quite unsatisfactory condition of Sino-American official relations ought to be especially emphasized at this time, in the hope that publicity will bring the relief we all desire. First, the Protocol Powers in Peking are attempting to function as a Little League of Nations in which one or more of the predominating powers try to use the organization to further their own individual ends. The United States is not a member of the League of Nations, and from a legal, as well as from a political standpoint, she should not regard herself as a member of Peking's League of Protocolians. The Protocol of 1901 was never ratified by the United States Senate and therefore has not in American law the status of a treaty.

Furthermore, just as foreign statesmen failed to understand that President Wilson could not bind the United States to the League, or to League policies, so foreign diplomats in Peking fail to appreciate that the American Minister, however good his intentions may be, cannot bind the American Government, or especially the American nation, to any policy of joint action in this country, such as armed intervention to which the consent of the American Congress would really be necessary. Mr. MacMurray tries hard to work with his Protocal colleagues and sometimes even to lead them in the direction Great Britain or some other power, wishes to go, but unfortunately, or otherwise, Mr. MacMurray cannot deliver the goods and gets criticized here and at home, both for trying and for his failure.

Second, the present "Bolshevik Peril" out here that is causing such fear, feigned or otherwise among several of the Proctol Le[illegible] is regarded as a joke, or "bu[illegible]," by a large section of the American public. The S. O. S. of the legation on the Red Peril, throughout China in general and in the Legation Quarter in particular, has apparently been received in the United States in the same spirit in which the American public laughed at the famous "Red Flag" on the White House warning issued by former Secretary of State Hughes several years ago.

From the best information I am able to obtain it was the American Minister who took the most active part in inducing the Chinese in Peking to raid the Russian Embassy, with the British Minister, the main instigator, remaining quietly behind the scenes, and the Dutch Minister, the Dean of the Diplomatic Corps, giving the actual permission. The Japanese Minister is said to have been quite luke-warm on the proposition.

But, however effective it may have been in Peking diplomacy or politics the Red Peril is not taken seriously in America, according to all indications received out here.

By H. G. W. WOODHEAD, C. B. E.
(Editor, The Peking & Tientsin Times).

The American Administration is less concerned with the situation in China than with the prospects of the Republican Party in the Presidential campaign of 1928. For two years or more the American people have been "doped" regarding the China situation. They have been led to believe that the present upheaval is a genuinely nationalist movement, free from Bolshevik influences, and that "foreign imperialism," and the "unequal treaties" lie at the root of China's troubles. And so we have witnessed in Washington, a policy exasperating in its flabbiness and indecision. It seems, indeed, as if a Washington journal which suggests that "as soon as the Americans can be withdrawn from China they should be withdrawn," reflects the views of those who at the moment control America's foreign policy. It is not surprising, in the circumstances, that those Americans in China, who imagined that they were living and pursuing their daily avocations under treaty rights, and the protection of their government, have become indignant at the latter's passivity. They perhaps find it difficult to understand why the Administration should adopt a strong hand in Nicaragua, where there have been no such series of outrages as have occurred in China, while apparently regarding wholesale evacuation as the only policy in this country.

Americans — business and professional men, missionaries, etc., owe the fact that they have been able to reside and pursue their lawful avocations in China entirely to the so-called "unequal treaties." But, unlike Great Britain and France, they did not secure these treaties by force, but by semi-parasitism. Except for Mukden and Antung—the opening of which to foreign trade was provided for in the Sino-American Commercial Treaty of 1901, not a single one of the fifty towns in which foreigners are permitted to reside and trade was opened by virtue of an agreement between America and China. American envoys followed in the wake of the victorious armies and fleets of other powers, and, without sharing in the risks and hazards of war, secured from the Chinese the same (or similar) privileges as those which have been won by other governments.

Canton, Shanghai, Tientsin and Hankow were all opened to foreign (including American) residence and trade by British treaties; Nanking by a French treaty. American business, missionary, educational and other interests in China have been founded and built up on rights secured by Britain and France over eighty years ago. And though a great majority of American business men appreciate this, and resent the pharasaical attitude of many of their instructed countrymen who boast of their government's righteousness in refraining from demanding concessions, or wresting the right of residence and trade from China by force, "an influential group of pacifist missionaries"—to use Dr. Allen C. Hutcheson's phrase—has actively participated in the anti-British agitation of the past two years.

The American brand of Hermit-crab not only avails itself of the habitations prepared by others, but reviles those who made the use of these habitations possible.

And now that these habitations are attacked, the inmates ejected, and the contents looted, the American Government refuses to be a party to any coercive measures. In effect, history it to repeat itself. Americans must withdraw from China unless they can recover their rights as the result of the action of other powers. It is no wonder that from Hankow and Shanghai, from Peking and Tientsin, protests have poured into Washington against this betrayal. Semi-parasitism does not appeal any more to the average American than to the average Briton.

U. S. Supreme Court Adjourns to October

Term Closed Today Notable For Attempts To Speed Justice.—Naval Oil Lease Cancellation Upheld.

Washington, June 6.—The United States Supreme Court convened today for its final session of the current term. It meets at noon, hands downs a number of decisions and orders in its always unsuccessful attempt to clear its docket of panding cases, and adjourns until next October.

The court has disposed of more than 900 of the 1,150 or more cases docketed during the term which started last October, including many important cases which set new precedents in the law.

Most of the nine justices of the court will leave in the next few days for their summer homes in cooler, quieter locations.

Chief Justice William Howard Taft will go to his place at Pointer-au-Pic, Quebec, Canada, on the north shore of the St. Lawrence river. Justice Willis Van Devanter will go to his place in the Thousand Islands region on the same river; Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, 86-year-old dean of the supreme bench both in years and service, will go to Beverly, Mass., and Justice Brandeis to Wood's Hole, Mass. Others plan to leave the capital for most or all of the summer.

This term of the court has been marked by new attempts to speed justice, especially on criminal appeals which in many cases heretofore have delayed imposition of sentences for months and years. The court now sees to it that the decisions are made in a few weeks. The court has also speeded up the dispatch of mandates, making its decisions effective in 25 days after the announcement, instead of 40 days.

Among the important decisions were those cancelling the Elk Hills naval oil reserve leases, upholding congress' power to require production of evidence, affirming the president's power to remove postmasters and others statutory officials without consent of the senate, approving the Volstead Act limitation on liquor prescriptions and the Harrison anti-narcotic act, invalidating the New York State "Anti-ticket Scalping law," affirming the Virgin Law for sterilization of imbeciles, and upholding the principle of city zoning.

DAUGHTERS of MIDAS

By Anne Austin © 1927 by NEA Service Inc.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

BILLY WELLS, NYDA LOMAX and WINNIE SHELTON, employes of the big T. Q. CURTIS department store, are taken into their employer's home as his wards for one year, because he wants to help them further ambitions which each has expressed. Billy, who wants to become a concert violinist, is the only one of the three that is serious, the others having lied to enjoy T. Q.'s generosity.

Billy is infatuated with DAL ROMAINE, nephew of MRS. MEADOWS, the hired hostess of the Curtis home, but she is deeply troubled when she suspects that he is "playing" both her and Winnie Shelton.

Billy tenderly remembers CLAY CURTIS, son of her benefactor, who has disinherited himself and is living in the Wells home in a poor part of town, working in the Truman factory by day and writing music at night.

The girls, unknown to T. Q., learn that he intends to adopt one of them when the year is up and to gain his affections, a series of intrigues, instituted by Nyda and Winnie and curiously involving Mrs. Meadows, Dal Romaine, and EDDIE BANNING, Nyda's chauffeur-sweetheart of department store days, turn the house into a hotbed of plotting and scheming.

Billy is disgusted with the whole thing and loses interest in her violin. Because she has a nervous breakdown, she leaves town for a month and believes in this time she has routed Romaine from her heart. Upon her return, however, she finds she is as much under his spell as ever. Thinking he would please Nyda, who has lied about her ambition to become a kindergarten teacher, T. Q. equips a model school in his home where two days a week Nyda teaches the children of the cook and housekeeper and twins of a wealthy neighbor couple. Reports of her unkindness and carelessness reach T. Q., and he spies on her one day to learn if this is true. The charges are confirmed. When T. Q. lets Nyda know of his presence in the room, she quickly becomes the interested, sweet teacher she has posed as being.

Billy loses interest in her music and finally has a breakdown. T. Q. is disappointed in Nyda's treatment of some children placed under her care in a kindergarten room he has fitted for her, because she has expressed a desire to be a teacher. He decides they need a change and takes the three girls and Mrs. Meadows to Europe for several months. Upon their return, they find the town in an upheaval over a Hindu fortune teller. Dal and RALPH TRUMAN take Billy and Nyda to his suite. He tells Billy she is to marry a man whose description fits Dal Romaine. Nyda returns from her experience with terror-stricken face. Ralph says he believes the man has an accomplice in the town and when the Hindu and Dal disappears simultaneously, Billy remembers these words.

Believing the girls need a change, he takes them to Europe for several months. Upon their return, they find the town in an upheaval over a Hindu fortune teller. All three girls are told amazingly intimate things by the strange man. RALPH TRUMAN, a friend, says he believes the Hindu has an accomplice. When the Hindu and Dal Romaine disappear simultaneously, Billy recalls Ralph's words and is vaguely troubled. She hears occasionally from Dal but his letters leave her unhappy. One night she passes Nyda's room and hears Nyda and a man quarreling.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 48.

When the calamity which Billy had feared did break with violence upon the Curtis household, she found that her sixth sense had played her false in only one particular—Winnie Shelton was not hurt or involved in it in any unpleasant way. Her position was merely strengthened by her obvious innocence of any wrong-doing in that instance, at least.

Billy was to wonder many times at her whole ugly drama was over why she had not been acute enough to suspect far more than she had of what was going on in Nyda's tormented mind. For instance, why had her usually alert mind not registered the fact that Nyda Lomax had taken acute but furtive interest in the safe in the library?

Old T. Q. had made no effort to keep the girls from knowing about the safe and its contents, nor had he been reasonably careful in working the combination in their presence. He had insisted they keep their jewelry in the safe when they were not actually wearing it. The value of the entire collection did not exceed ten thousand dollars, but one night, when handing out their "gewgaws," as he called them, to the girls, he had taken a small chamois bag from the safe and had shown them a half dozen large, unset diamonds.

"Guess I'm sorta superstitious about diamonds," he grinned. "I heard someone say when I was a half-grown boy that he'd rather have diamonds than money in the bank. I bought this first diamond with the first five hundred that the store really didn't need. During the last twenty years I've owned a good many diamonds, partly because I love the looks of 'em and the feel of 'em, and partly because of that old superstition that they were the soundest investment. Once I had to sell all but this first one to tide my business over a bad year, but I've bought a stone every once in a while. Pretty things, ain't they?"

And later Billy wondered why she had not been alarmed at the look of greed in Nyda's eyes as they watched, with almost ferocious intentness, every turn and twist of T. Q.'s fingers as they worked the combination of the safe.

Later, when suspicion of the robbery of T. Q. Curtis' library safe fell upon herself, Billy could remember those things and wonder at her own stupidity. How easy she had been! How blindly she had played into Nyda's hands that night before the robbery!

Winnie was not at home that night. She was at the bedside of her father, who was ill with pneumonia. And because a doctor had sat all night by the desperately sick man's bedside, too, her alibi was perfect.

Billy and Nyda had spent the evening at home, Nyda supposedly in bed all the time with a "raging" headache, according to the message she sent down to Mrs. Meadows and T. Q. at the dinner hour. After dinner Billy played her violin for the two old people, concluding the short program with Clay Curtis' lovely, lilting, somehow sad little song, "To an Autumn Dryad."

Mrs. Meadows went away early, and the girl and the old man sat for an hour talking first of inconsequential things, and, finally, of Clay Curtis.

"Mother says his symphony is almost finished. I told you he was writing a symphony, called "The Song of Toil,' didn't I. Professor Navratil says he believes Clay will make a great success with it—not a financial success, but an artistic success. Clay has been to Chicago, mother says, and has heard the first two movements of it played by a symphony orchestra there, as a favor to him, of course."

"An artistic success is all right," T. Q. frowned to hide the light of pride in his stern gray eyes. "But how about a little financial success? Does the fool boy intend to work in a factory the rest of his life?"

Billy bristled instantly in defense of Clay, though her heart throbbed with a dull ache at the mention of his name. "If you took any interest in popular songs, Daddy Curtis, you'd know that Clay is already on the road to financial success. He wrote a sentimental little song—words and music, both—called 'Light o' Love,' that is being featured in a musical comedy in New York, and that everyone's singing and whistling and waltzing to right now. He may make a fortune on it—one foolish little tune, but a tune that gets into your blood and haunts your dreams."

"A fortune out of a song!" T. Q. smiled wryly.

"Mother says Clay is shy about the song," Billy went on. "He despises that sort of music, is embarrassed when he hears his own song over the radio or on a phonograph. I'm awfully glad for Clay. He's worked like a slave, night and day—"

"I'm proud of him, too," T. Q. said in a low voice, not meeting her eyes.

She left him then, with his memories of his son, and with the bittersweet thought of that son's coming success.

When she reached her own room at ten o'clock, Billy found Viola turning back the covers of her bed and laying out her things for the night.

"Miss Nyda she say can you come see her a minute before you go to sleep," Viola told her. "She still got a powerful bad headache."

"Tell her I'll come in about half an hour," Billy answered.

She wanted to think undisturbed about Clay and the wonderful things that were happening and about to happen to him. She had seen her mother that very day, had felt unworthy jealousy of her mother's fond delight in Clay, her pride in him.

"Clay has become more her own child than I am," Billy confessed to herself, then began to weep, forlornly.

The year which had promised to be so wonderful was nearly over. In less than a month the year of probation would be ended. Two girls would go back to hard work and poverty. If she were one of those two—and she had no earthly reason to believe that she, and not Winnie or Nyda, would be chosen for adoption by T. Q. Curtis—she would be really worse off than she had been at the beginning of the year.

After she had bathed, she resentfully wrapped a negligee about her for the duty call upon Nyda Lomax.

"I was just dying to talk to someone," Nyda greeted her with unusual friendliness. "Sit down on the edge of the bed; I'll move over. I want you to help me plan a costume for the masquerade ball at the Country Club."

The two girls talked for almost an hour. It was nearly half-past eleven when T. Q. Curtis knocked at the door, asked with kindly solicitude about Nyda's headache, and then called out his good nights in a cheerful voice.

"He's really a darling, isn't he?" Nyda asked lazily. "Which reminds me—I've got to study for a quiz tomorrow in kindergarten methods. Will you hand me my book off the desk? Oh, I forgot! I left it down in the library. I intended to study there after dinner tonight, to keep T. Q. company. Won't you get it for me before you go to bed, if you don't mind?"

Billy agreed readily, feeling more drawn to Nyda than she had been for months. The girl was really studying hard.

It was nearly twelve when Billy entered the library and switched on the light in a reading lamp on T. Q.'s dask. After a bit of searching she found Nyda's textbook on a little side table beside a wing chair; then it occurred to her that she had nothing in her own room with which to read herself to sleep. She went to the book shelves and scanned the titles of scores of books before she found one that appealed to her mood.

As she stooped to open the glass doors of that section of the book cases a loop of blue beads which served to fasten her negligee caught on the knob of the case and broke. One of the bright crystal spheres rolled out of sight under the bookcases, and she went down on hands and knees to grope for it. It was then that she realized it must have rolled quite a distance, to that section of the bookcases that opened by pressure of a secret spring to reveal the wall safe in which T. Q. kept private papers, the girls' jewelry and his unset diamonds.

Without hesitation, she pressed upon it, watched the section of the bookcase swing slowly outward.

She was on her knees before the safe, picking up the strayed blue bead, and looking for any other that might have dropped, too, when the voice of Sawyers, the butler, startled her.

"That you, Miss Billy?" he called from the doorway. Then his eyes narrowed with suspicion as he saw that she had been kneeling before the exposed wall safe.

"I came down for a book for Miss Lomax, and broke the fastening on my robe," she explained rather breathlessly. "I was looking for one of the beads."

When she was again in her room, after having delivered Nyda's book to her, she went to stand in the window she had opened for the night, her hot cheeks grateful for the rush of wintry air. Why had she acted like a thief caught in the act, she asked herself disgustedly. Her thoughts were broken into suddenly by the faint sound of a familiar whistle. She leaned far out of the window, her heart beating fast with sudden, wild joy. That was Dal's signal. He had come back! And he wanted to see her! He could not even wait until morning. She stretched out her arms into the coldness of the night and then ran to dress.

JUDGE GIVES SEVEN RULES TO AID CUPID

Matrimony Inaugurates a New Life, Says Chicagoan After Presiding Over 22,000 Divorce Trials.

New York, June 6.—Seven rules for a happy marriage are prescribed by Judge Joseph Sabath, of Chicago, who holds the national record, and what is said to be the world's record, in having presided over 22,000 divorce trials.

"There must be rules for every game," says Judge Sabath in Collier's Weekly, "and the matrimonial game will be smoother if you remember that in a sense you are being reincarnated; that you the beginning a new life, assimiliating a new viewpoint, entering a new sphere."

These seven rules he said contain the essence of a successful marriage:

1. Don't be a matrimonial Babbitt. Keep in step with your partner's mind, body and soul.

2. Remember that vulgarity and successful marriage are mortal enemies.

3. Compromise is the anti-toxin that destroys the germs of divorce.

4. To have mothers-in law is fortunate, but to live with them is dangerous, and to criticize them is fatal.

5. Find out your beloved's ideas of matrimonial ethics before the wedding; then make them the basis of your love life.

6. Park your past at the altar—and never go back to claim it.

7. Courtship is the prep school for the college of matrimony. The real study of the art of love begins on the honeymoon and lasts a lifetime.

8,000 Rotarians Open Meeting in Belgium

More Than 3,000 Cross Atlantic From United States and Canada to Attend International Meeting.

Ostend, Belgium, June 6.—With world wide peace and goodwill its watchword International Rotary opened the most widely attended convention in its history here today.

The convention was officially opened by King Albert of Belgium, himself an honorary member of both the San Francisco and Brussels Rotary Clubs.

More than 8,000 Rotarians and members of their families have gathered here for the convention, coming from every corner of the world. More than 3,000 came from the United States and Canada, crossing the Atlantic in a tremendous fleet of seven liners.

Special trains brought parties from points in Holland, Spain and Italy. Thousands of British Rotarians crossed the channel for the convention, making probably the largest single national delegation. The Japanese party came from the greatest distance, taking the first through train to run from the Far East to Paris.

"Six years ago the Convention was held at Edinburgh, Scotland, and when we realize the extent to which Rotary has grown since that time who dares to prophecy what the next few years have in store for us in the matter of extension, especially in Europe," said Harry H. Rogers, President of Rotary International, addressing the convention.

"At Edinburgh there were but seven countries in Rotary, with a total of 975 clubs. At that time there were but 35 clubs in the British Isles, and but two on the Continent of Europe. Madrid, Spain, had 12 members, and Paris, France, sixteen. Today, there are 40 countries in Rotary, with 2595 clubs. Now there are 251 clubs in the British Isles, and 72 clubs on the Continent of Europe, with 2,709 Rotarians."

National Board to Make Crime Study

Organizers Hope to Reduce Lawbreaking by Scientific Inquiry Into Causes and Correction.

Chicago, June 6.—Formation of a national board to study crime was planned by the National Crime Study commission in session here.

The organizers of the movement, which include some of the foremost jurists and social workers of the country, hope to aid in the elimination of crime by scientific study of cause and corrective measures.

Included in the number are Jane Addams of Hull House, Justice William Black of the New York Supreme court; Judge Ben B. Lindsey of the Denver juvenile court; Manuel Levine, presiding judge of the Ohio court of appeals; Judge Frank Murphey of the Detroit Recorders court; Judge Carlos Hardy of the Los Angeles Superior court; Charles S. Whitman, president of the American Bar Association and W. W. McCorey, San Antonio judge.

ITALIANS CAN SWEAR ONLY IN WHISPERS

Law Provides Fine for Every "Cuss Word."—Club Is Formed Where Feelings Can Be Expressed.

Rome, June 6.—Power of repression must be highly developed in the Italian who misses a six-inch putt or accidentally smashes a finger with a hammer, unless, of course, he feels sufficiently rewarded by the fine he has to pay for swearing.

Observers declare that Italians will be forced to develop a system of swearing that can be muttered into the beard or sphagetti and thus effectively silenced. Anyone who swears must be prepared to pay a fine of 10 lire and 10 centimes to the policeman that hears him. The curser will then be given a receipt. The 10 centimes is for the government stamp which must appear on a receipt of any kind.

If the person who swears refuses to pay and includes the policeman among the targets of a high power vocabulary he is lucky to get off with a 50 lire fine. If the swearing were extremely classic he might even get a day in jail.

There is a workman's swearing club in Florence where for payment of a small fee, workers can relieve injured feelings out of earshot of the police.

Mussolini Turns to Radio Development

Italy's Premier Seeks to Bring Country to a Par With Other European Nations.

Rome, June 6.—Broadcasting on a world basis with centrally controlled stations is the latest program of Premier Mussolini The Duce has reserved to himself the right to appoint the president of the new central radio body, which is to bring radio here up to the level of other European countries.

A special law, authorizing the creation by the newly formed corporation, of nine new transmitting stations, has been passed. Rome is to have a 25 kilowatt transmitter, instead of the present 3.5 KW station. This will bring it up to the level of the big high-power stations of Daventry in England and Radio-Paris. It will be inferior in power only to the 30 KW Berlin station, at present the most powerful in Europe.

Milan is to have a 7 KW station, and transmitters of 3 KW will be built at Florence, Genoa, Turin, Naples, Bologna and Palermo.

The present system of charging the equivalent of $5 a year to possessors of radio sets will be maintained, but, in addition, a trifling tax is to be imposed on all house-holders, whether they have sets or not.

Italy, at present, possesses only three radio-casting stations, namely Rome, Milan and Naples, the first named running on 3 KW power, while the other two work with 2.5 and 2 KW respectively.

While radio was received with great enthusiasm on its introduction into Italy some two and a half years ago, it has languished of late, though a certain impetus was given to it again by the broadcasting, during the recent season, of the operas given at the municipal Opera-house in Rome.

To Dig for Ancient Ruins in Illinois

Archaeologists Think Mounds Near Collinsville May Reveal Clues of Former Civilization.

East St. Louis, Ill., June 6.—The Egypt of the Nile may boast of her towering pyramids, buried cities and the jewel-studded tombs of her medieval rulers, but she may soon have a rival in those ancient relics. Excavations being made in Rattle Snake Mound between this city and Collinsville promises to disclose a civilization as old as that on Egypt.

The attention of the archaeologists of the world is being attracted to the mysterious mounds that have for many thousands of years retained their secrets. Archaeologists who have made excavations here declare the builders of these mounds are older than the builders of the pyramids.

Today the dreams of the scientists and archaeologists for centuries seem about to be realized as the skilled workmen carefully unearth the bones of the ancient Mound Builders buried many centuries ago. Already the mounds have given up more than 100 skeletons.

The excavating and exploring of the mound is being directed by Dr. Warren K. Moorhead, curator of Museum, Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass. Associated with Dr. Moorhead, and in active charge of the work, is professor Jay L. B. Taylor, engineer and archaeologist of Nebraska.

Rattle Snake Mound is located on a tract of land which has just been recently acquired by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company on which they propose the construction of a switch yard. Dr. Moorhead, co-operating with the University of Illinois, secured permission from the company to excavate the mound.

Viewed from a distance the top of the mound resembles a miniature military camp, the tents of the small army of workmen may be seen for miles away by travelers on the East St. Louis and Collinsville hard road.

Closing Grain Review.

Chicago, June 6.—The wheat market was easy today with some local selling while commission house demand was only moderate.

Heavy selling developed late in the session in all pits and prices dropped sharply, with wheat 1¾ to 2⅜ cents lower and corn 1⅜ to 1½ cents lower. Better weather over the grain belt was responsible for the sudden liquidation. The cash market in wheat was ½ cent higheer.

Corn prices were higher most of the day. The general opinion seemed to be that the season is so far behind that a reduced acreage and a fairly large reduction in the crop is almost positive. The cash market was unchanged to 1 cent lower.

Oats were little changed. The cash market was unchanged.

Provisions were lower.

Graham 2; Quitman 8.
Pickering 6, Rosendale 4.
Barnard 4, Burlington Junction 4.

Quitman and Barnard today lead the Nodaway County baseball league by virtue of victories yesterday over Graham and Burlington Junction. Large crowds turned out at Quitman, Barnard and Rosendale for the games, the second series of the season in the league.

Barnard continued its winning streak and defeated the Burlington team, which last week scored a victory after being organized just a few hours.

Legion Party Success Despite Lack of Fish

Mulligan Stew Preared by Chef Ben Chandler Takes Place of More Finny Repast.

The annual spring party and fishing trip of the James Edward Gray Post of the Maryville American Legion was a grand success, the forty members decided upon their return yesterday morning.

The camp was established on the 102 River, eight miles south and a mile east of Maryville. Although the fishing did not prove as successful as planned, no one went hungry, as Chef Ben Chandler had a big mulligan stew ready for consumption at midnight.

Comets Move Up by Defeating Bethany

Lefty Lewis Holds Opponents to Four Hits, While His Mates Give Good Support.

The Comets, Maryville's baseball club in the Northwest Missouri League, moved up a couple of notches yesterday by defeating Bethany there 7 to 1.

Lefty Lewis, backed by good support and a team that has found its batting eye, found no difficulty in winning game out of six starts. Lewis allowed only four hits with his overhand and side delivery.

"Conscious Turning to God Is Worship"

Reverence, Faith and Love Are Requisites, Rev. W. S. Woodhull Tells Congregation.

"A man is apt to think of the self or person inhabiting the body as consisting of three parts, mind and heart and will for thinking, feeling and choosing," said the Rev. W. S. Woodhull of the First Methodist Church in his sermon on "The Worth of Worship," yesterday morning.

"And then when he considers religion he adds to these a vague something that worships called a soul.

"As a matter of fact the whole man is just one inseparable person. When he thinks his whole self engages in the process. In that mental act there must be something of volition. He cannot feel without intellection and something of decision; nor can he choose without intellectual conception and emotional strain. So when he worships thought and feeling and willing are joined with the profound consciousness of the face of God and of spiritual contact with Him. The whole man worships.

"In fact worship might be truly defined as a conscious turning to God in reverence, faith and love. Harriett Beecher Stowe has put just this thought into her beautiful verse:

'Still, still with thee when purple morning breaketh,
When the bird waketh and the shadows flee.
Fairer than morning, lovelier than daylight,
Dawns the sweet consciousness, I am with Thee.'

"And Jesus emphasizes the same true turning to God of the whole man in his words 'The true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth. For the father seeketh such to worship Him.'

"If worship is so defined its worth is obvious. However, none can be told its worth who has not deeply experienced it and whoever has entered into the experience of true worship does not need to be told.

"It is necessary that we sometimes emphasize the value of forms or symbols of worship. We live in the midst of signs. Indeed, every expression of the inner life must be through some accepted symbol. Shaking hands, for example, is a foolish gesture except for the warm friendliness that it signifies, and it would be far less useful if it were not a means of increasing the friendliness of which it is the sign.

"So every symbol not only expresses thought or feeling or purpose, but its sincere use strengthens and increases that which it symbolizes. The sincere and thoughtful use of the signs or worship and its symbolic actions deepens and enriches the true worship of the heart. The forms we use become steps by which we climb nearer God.

"Houses of public worship, if they be churchly in architecture, are reminding all who look of the fact of God. The ringing of church bells and the resonant melody of the chimes are persuasive calls to enter the spirit of prayer. The cross on the church spire or tower speaks with silent eloquence of the Divine Sacrifice.

One of our Protestant inconsistencies is that we sing:

'In the Cross of Christ I Glory,
Towering the wrecks of time.
All the light of sacred story,
Gathers round its head sublime.'

"And then we refuse to put it on our churches or in them.

"Stained glass windows, which belong peculiarly to the Christian church, with their speaking forms, the altar in the Roman Catholic and Episcopal churches and its innocuous substitute in the Evangelical churches, the vestments worn by choir and clergymen long associated with prayer and praise not only express the worship of the congregation, but when truly and rightly used deepen the spirit of worship.

"There is, of course, that constant danger of making the ritual so elaborate and so artificial that it becomes a kind of white magic. Then the sign is substituted for the worship that it is intended to signify and that which should be a help becomes by its overuse or insincere use a dangerous hindrance. In such a case the blessing becomes a curse.

"The problem of the whole church is to emphasize the spirit of true worship and to use the various forms and symbols of worship to such an extent and in such a manner as will most surely and largely express and enrich that conscious turning toward God in reverence and faith and love. To discover and to teach the worth of worship is the supreme and imminent task of the Church of God."

Judge Dawson Sits in Ormsby Murder Case

Judge John M. Dawson returned Saturday evening from Princeton, Mo., where he presided in the murder case of Mark and Christopher Ormsby of Princeton, brothers, charged with the murder of Tommy Bryan in the second degree. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty. Judge Dawson was called to preside as Judge L. B. Woods disqualified himself. The case started Tuesday with the selection of a jury, and testimony commenced Wednesday.

A plea of self-defense was entered by the Ormsby boys.

Mrs. T. P. Fitzmaurice and daughter, Miss Marjorie Fitzmaurice, accompanied by William Meyer of St. Joseph, spent yesterday in Maryville with the daughter and sister, Mrs. Frank Sims, and Mr. Sims. Mrs. Fitzmaurice will attend the Colorado State Teachers College at Greeley and this summer Miss Fitzmaurice will be a student at Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill.

Miss Etta Stevenson underwent an operation for the removal of her tonsils at the St. Francis Hospital this morning.
